

Inspiring Success...

CCAAP was established in April 2003 when a core group of committed parents launched a grassroots effort to improve the educational experience for African American students in the Lewisville Independent School District (LISD).

With a profound sense of responsibility and a clear vision, they established a voice where there had been silence in the past. This impassioned group of citizens and parents felt that through the following endeavors, they would make a difference for the African American child in education:

- Proactively seeking initiatives to ensure more children experience academic success
- Engaging African American parents in the educational process
- Building successful partnerships with the community and LISD
- Fostering an improved appreciation and understanding of African American culture
